N20trn Pension fund: FG Says No Plan to 'Illegally Access' Workers' Contributions

As Labour vows to resist move

BY BONNY AMADI
Nigeria's The President Bola Tinubu-led government has stated that there are no plans to "illegally access" workers' savings and pension contributions.

Nigeria's Finance Minister and Coordinating Minister of the Economy, Wale Edun, recently in his address to State House correspondents after the Federal Executive Council (FEC) meeting at the Presidential Villa on Tuesday, 14 May, hinted on unlocking the N20 trillion from the nation's pension funds and other funds to finance critical infrastructure projects across the country. This was even as the Nigerian labour congress has called to the federal government to reconsider any move to tap into pension funds.

Fubara made the vow while declaring the commencement of construction of N80.3 billion Elele-Egbeda-Omoku Road dual carriageway and bridge project in Emohua Local Government Area of Rivers.

Fubara expressed pleasure at recent attacks on his supporters by hoodlums allegedly backed by outgoing Local Government Council chairmen in the state.

He assured the people that his government was dedicated to serving their interests and emphasised that no distraction would deter it from serving that objective.

He warned that those who attack innocent citizens in the name of politics would not be forgiven and would pay for their crimes.

BUA Cement to fund N120bn Lokoja-Benin road reconstruction

The Federal Executive Council has given the green light for the equalisation of the Olupella section of the Lokoja-Benin road and other projects totalling N120 billion.

The funding for these projects will be provided by BUA Cement Plc under the tax credit scheme.

This decision was reached during a lengthy meeting chaired by President Bola Tinubu on Tuesday, during which 21 significant policy initiatives were unveiled.

The approved policies and projects were contained in a statement by the Special Adviser to the President on Information and Strategy, Bayo Onanuga, on Tuesday.

He said, "On Day 2 of the FEC meeting, approval was given for the award of contract for the equalisation of Lokoja-Benin Road, Olupella Section, Lokoja-Benin, Diallasek Auchu Section -Uromi Link Road and Lokoja-Benin Road, Ekpoma Section."

"It was on this road that a fuel tanker fell into high water recently, with villagers having to swim to rescue the occupants of the tanker. The reconstruction will be financed by BUA Cement at a cost of N120 Billion under the tax credit scheme."

The tax credit scheme enables private companies to fund road projects, alleviating the financial burden on the Federal Government.

In exchange, these companies receive tax credits equivalent to their expenditure on the roads.

Onanuga also revealed the approval of contracts for various road projects nationwide, including the Kaima-Tesse road in Kwara State, the Benin-Agbor road, the Benin Bypass, and the Nsagbi-Wara road in Kebbi State.

These projects are anticipated to amount to approximately N540bn.

A contract worth N230 billion was sanctioned for Messrs CCECC to construct a bypass in Kano. The project is slated for completion within the next 36 months.

The FEC meeting, which commenced on Monday, concluded on Tuesday, marking an unprecedented duration in the history of the council.

SADC Member States validate roadmap to leverage sustainable agricultural mechanization SAM4CSA

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the Southern African Development Community (SADC) recently hosted a regional workshop from 14-16 May 2024 to review and validate the draft Roadmap to Leverage Sustainable Agricultural Mechanization for Climate Smart Agriculture (SAM4CSA) in Southern Africa.

The workshop brought together representatives from Regional Economic Communities (SADC and COMESA), SADC Member States, FAO experts, development partners, farmer organisations and the private sector and saw progress of SADC Members in developing their own roadmaps, setting up a Regional Committee on Agricultural Mechanization (ReCAM) as well as National Committees on Agricultural Mechanization (NiaCAMS).

In addition to reviewing the draft regional roadmap, the workshop also provided an opportunity for development partners, private sector and government representatives to identify entry points for investment in the regional roadmap.

"Specifically, there were three major outputs from the workshop: a refined and validated regional SAM4CSA roadmap, guidelines for the establishment of functional Regional and National Mechanization Committees and buy-in from stakeholders in the region on sustainable agricultural mechanization and climate smart agriculture (CSA)," said Josef Kienzle, FAO Agricultural Engineer.

"This is a special occasion because Southern Africa becomes the first subregion in Sub-Saharan Africa to adopt a subregion-wide programmatic approach to the implementation of the Framework for Sustainable Agricultural Mechanization in Africa that was developed by FAO and the African Union Commission in 2018," said Patricia Talla, FAO Subregion Coordinator for Southern Africa.

The Framework for Sustainable Agricultural Mechanization in Africa (F-SAMA) was developed through a collaboration between FAO and the African Union Commission (AUC). The framework was published in 2018 and forms the basis for mechanization initiatives and promotion in Africa. The FAO Subregional Office for Southern Africa has taken up domestication of the F-SAMA for CSA and made it a flagship programme.

Amidst high charges: Aro psychiatric patients on rampage over poor treatment

*As doctor, nurses narrowly escape death

Psychiatric patients at the Neuropsychiatric Hospital Abokuta, the Ogun State capital, have protested what they described as poor treatment being received from the federal government facility located around Aro, in the state capital.

The violent protest, which took the entire staff of the health facility by surprise, lasted over two hours before police operatives from the Lafenwa Divisional Headquarters intervened, and brought the situation under control, reports Channels TV.

In the commotion that ensued, a psychiatric doctor alongside three other nurses allegedly died during the length of their violent protest, over the alleged poor treatment they are daily subjected to at the facility.

It was gathered that the mentally ill patients at the Aro Neuropsychiatric facility were protesting poor feeding, poor sanitary system, as well as the absence of alternative electricity each time the electricity distribution company seized light at the hospital.

Some relatives of the patients on admission, said that the matter had been ongoing for a while before some of the partially healed patients, resorted to protesting the situation even when it became obvious that the management of the health facility would not remedy the situation.

A female relative of one of the patients on admission, who pleaded anonymity, said that the least amount being paid by each of the affected patients ranged from N500, 000 to N700, 000 depending on the length of their stay at the facility.

When contacted, the Public Relations Officer of the facility, Ajoloba said the matter was "just an internal affair", which has been redressed and is not worth being reported as news.

the National Pension Commission (PenCom) revealed that Nigeria's pension fund assets dropped marginally to N19,669 trillion for the period ended 31st March 2024.

However, reacting to media reports on the threat to the N20 Trillion pension fund, the Minister of Finance and the Coordinator of the Economy, Wale Edun, gave the assurance that the government would not illegally access the savings and pensions of workers.

"It has come to my notice that there are stories making the rounds that the Federal Government plans to illegally access the hard-earned savings and pension contributions of workers," he said in a video released by the ministry on Thursday.

He added, "Nothing could be further from the truth. The pension industry like most of the financial industry is highly regulated. There are rules, there are limitations about what pension money can be invested in and what it cannot be invested in."

"The Federal Government has no intention whatsoever to go beyond those limits and go outside those bounds which are there to safeguard the pensions of workers."

According to the minister, what was discussed was "merely for information" with no approval taken.

"Merely for noting; merely for information, no approval was sought for any action whatsoever as there was an ongoing initiative drawing in all the major stakeholders in the long term savings industry, those that handle funds that are available over a long period to see how within the rules; within the regulations and the laws, these funds could be used maximally; most effectively to drive investment in key growth areas, infrastructure, housing and of course to find a way to provide Nigerians with affordable mortgages within this context.

"There's no attempt or no consideration to provide less safe investments for pension funds or even insurance funds or any investment funds that are made available."

"No attempt whatsoever to increase the risk, no attempt whatsoever to lower the returns that would otherwise be earned. And we must remember that the Federal Government possesses the ability to provide guarantees where such are needed in order to unlock funding that would lead to growth, creation of jobs and the alleviation of poverty."

"It is an ongoing conversation, a challenge, a test for the best and the brightest in the financial industry to come up with solutions that whilst safeguarding the long term savings do provide an avenue that can help to boost growth in the economy."

Labor Kicks
The Organised Labour has frowned at the Federal Government's plan to utilise the N19.66 trillion pension funds for infrastructure development.

This is contained in a joint letter signed by the Nigeria Labour Congress (NLC) and the Trade Union Congress (TUC), which was addressed to the Minister of Finance on Thursday in Abuja.

The letter, which was signed by Mr Joe Ajaero, NLC President, and Mr Temmy Etim-Okon, TUC Deputy President, was entitled "Leave our Pension Fund Alone. Do not Tamper with Workers' Funds."

According to Ajaero, the announcement has ignited deep apprehension and unrest among Nigerian workers, who are primary contributors of these funds.

"We, therefore, urge the government to reconsider its plans to tap into pension funds and instead explore sustainable financing options that do not compromise the retirement security of Nigerian workers.

"Organised Labour will resist any action that seeks to undermine the retirement savings of Nigerian workers," they said.

FG to pay N130bn as part of gas supply debt - Minister

Chief Bola Tinubu has approved submission of the Minister of State for Petroleum Resources, (Gas) to defray outstanding debt owed to the gas supply companies to the power sector operators.

The minister said the payments would be in two parts as there is the legacy debt and the current debt. "For the current debt, approval has been given for a cash payment of about N130 billion from the gas stabilisation fund which the Federal Ministry of Finance will pay." The payment for the legacy debt is actually going to be made but from future royalties and exchange of incomes in the gas subsector which is quite satisfactory to the gas supply companies.

The last figure was about 1.3 billion dollars and this payment, we believe, will go a long way to encourage these gas companies to enter into firm supply contracts with the power generating companies," he said.

Adelabu said the Federal Government planned to adopt a model that would ensure firm contracts between gas companies and majority of the power generating companies. "The day they cannot supply gas, there is no penalty, but on the firm supply contract, they will be under contractual obligation to supply gas to these power generating companies so that we have a consistent power generation. Adelabu said that for the power generating companies, the debt is put at N1.3 trillion.

SFAX Group Chairman Harps On Blue Economy Potential at LAUTECH Lecture

Dr. Taiwo Afolabi, Chairman, SFAX Group, has identified offshore coastal tourism and renewable energy generation as some of the potential areas of growth that Nigeria needs to take advantage of in developing its blue economy.

Afolabi, while delivering the 16th Convocation Lecture of the Ladoko Akintola University of Technology (LAUTECH) Ogbomoso on the topic "Towards a sustainable blue economy and marine development in Nigeria: trends, challenges and prospects", noted that the country has many untapped opportunities in the maritime sector.

He said developing the country's blue economy is now more imperative than ever due to the government's policy of moving away from the largely one-product economy that Nigeria has been running for decades.

"Serious attention should be devoted to the development of our coastlines by the government as this could spur huge recreational and economic activities around such localities. Coastal tourism development has the potential to provide socio-economic benefits to Nigeria, especially during this period when the Nigerian government is trying to diversify the economy from being a predominantly crude oil-based economy to a multi-product economy, which can withstand the volatility in oil prices in the world market," he said.

"One other lucrative sector within the blue economy concept is the opportunity for harvesting renewable energy. Renewable energies, such as wind, solar, hydro, and tidal energy, are energy alternatives to fossil fuels that can contribute to reducing the carbon footprint of the maritime sector.

"Offshore wind energy is also a real and promising form of renewable energy generated by offshore wind turbines, which makes it possible to take advantage of strong ocean winds for electricity generation later exported to land where it is consumed in several economic activities. In turn, solar energy can be used in power navigation and communication ships' systems and equipped with those of other floating structures."

ABCON seeks SEC's guidance, alliance in harmonising digital currency P2P FX sector to the continued existence of BDCs in Nigeria through online virtual transactions platforms which gives access to millions of Nigerians to trade in foreign exchange without trace and accountability.

He also explained that ABCON has invested in requisite technology to ensure the continued existence of the business and preserve the integrity of the sub-sector. He opined that the future of BDC's business is digital currency. The National President of ABCON said that the meeting with the SEC DG and the present executive board of the SEC was a follow up on the earlier online virtual consultation.

Gwadabasi said: "ABCON is the umbrella body for all licensed retail foreign exchange dealers, which came into existence in 1991. Our objective is to liaise with our regulators, relevant stakeholders and security agencies as one cannot divorce the retail exchange market from the ecosystem of foreign exchange market seeing that the BDC market is global and has been in operation before our independence. It has been there before the creation of the central bank of Nigeria".

Gwadabasi explained that the system came under regulation in 1986 during the administration of former President Ibrahim Babangida, who felt the need to formalise the sector through the issuance of license by the then ministry of finance with the objective to formalise the informal sector.

Gwadabasi said that as of today there are over 34 million Nigerians dealing in digital currency and the number is rising by about 9% with a huge market of $9 billion annually and there are thousands of multichannel virtual currency platforms and none is indigenous to Nigeria. P2P represents individual to individual transactions.

He emphasised that innovation can only be guaranteed on trust.

Dr Timi Agana the SEC DG responded with a robust understanding of the ABCON chairman's speech.

He said: "I understand that ABCON is desirous of setting up a digital market platform with the intention to be part of the emerging digital currency ecosystem in Nigeria. We at the SEC are open to help the sector grow for the love of the country therefore there will be meetings with the relevant departments of the SEC to detail methods and strategies that will strengthen the Naira through necessary innovative ideas as shared by ABCON".

"The SEC DG also reiterates that there are new rules put in place to accommodate local millennials to develop digital platforms therefore the SEC will cooperate with ABCON in order to achieve the desired objectives. Dr Timi who is highly knowledgeable about the virtual currency market and the market makers directed that proposed ABCON presentation and the development of ABCON digital market model named Koletyomoni to be finalised as quickly as possible as there are other interests working underground and should be forwarded to SEC tech-nic team for study and timely review. Dr Timi did not forget to emphasise on the powers of the government through the SEC and that the agency will not hesitate to use its powers where necessary to keep sanity in the issuance, marketing and trading of securities in Nigeria's capital market".

ABCON's technical partner Mr Oluwasgun Koseman thanked the DG Dr Timi and his intelligently experienced SEC team which had act with caution. "Politics will come and go, but we will still live our lives. If you deliberately hurt anybody because of expressing your usefulness support, nobody will forgive you.

"I have been the target of abuse as the Governor who doesn't know what to do with power, but have I said anything?"

"So, I am advising those people who call themselves local government chairman and that have few days in office, to conduct themselves in a peaceful manner," Fubara said.

The governor also highlighted the transient nature of political power and urged politicians to

The governor said the contractor, Craneburg Construction Company, had affirmed to completing the project within the specified timeframe outlined in the contract agreement.

"We are constructing this road out of our genuine commitment to end the economic recession because we have an economic interest here," he said.

Sen. John Mbata, a former member, House of Representatives, praised the potential economic impact of the road when completed.

Sanwo-Olu, Zulum, Amosun, Other Experts Seek Transparent Tax System to Boost IGRs

Lagos State Governor, Mr. Babajide Sanwo-Olu, and his counterparts from Sokoto and Borno States have emphasised the need to make the country's tax system more transparent and accountable to Nigerians to boost confidence and voluntary compliance.

The governors made the call at the ongoing 26th Annual Tax Conference organized by the Chartered Institute of Taxation of Nigeria (CITN) in Abuja, with the theme, "Sustainable Tax Culture and Economic Roadmap for Nation Building".

Speaking at the conference, Governor Sanwo-Olu who was represented by his Special Adviser on Taxation and Revenue, Mr. Abdul-Kabir Opeyemi Ogunbo, said the theme of the Conference was apt and timely given that Nigeria, like many other nations, is currently facing significant economic challenges.

While underscoring the crucial role of a transparent and efficient tax administration in fostering confidence and voluntary compliance among taxpayers, he emphasized the necessity for citizens to witness tangible outcomes from their tax contributions, highlighting the pivotal role taxes play in fueling public services and infrastructural development. Sanwo-Olu stressed the shift in mindset needed, urging taxpayers to view tax payments not as a burden but as an investment in a better future for Nigeria. He said building a strong and sustainable future through a robust tax system that fosters economic growth and development had become inevitable.

Sanwo-Olu said, "We must all understand the crucial role taxes play in building a better Nigeria for ourselves and for generations to come." "The theme also highlights the need for a clear economic roadmap which should take note of the architecture of our developmental ideologies as they are designed to provide the government with the necessary resources to cater for the social needs of its citizens, therefore we need a tax system that incentivizes investment, job creation, and economic diversification.

"We need to explore innovative ways to expand the tax base while fostering a business environment that allows our economy to thrive. The good news is that Nigeria is already taking positive steps in these directions. The recent efforts to streamline state-level taxes and the focus on integrating the growing remote workforce into the tax net are commendable initiatives."

The governor said, "The CITN plays a vital role in fostering this vital shift. Your commitment to professional excellence and education is instrumental in ensuring a tax system that is fair, efficient, and promotes economic development."

However, former Governor of Ogun State, Senator Ibikunle Amosun, who declared the conference open, while stressing the need to prioritize growing internally Generated Revenue (IGR) over relying solely on borrowing to fund national and sub-national budgets, said borrowing to fund the budgets was not the way to go amid the current national economic challenge when "our nation and its constituent states and local governments are going through very difficult times and finding it hard to provide for its teeming populace, acceptable standards of living, employment with the growing population of youths, infrastructure and basic amenities that will make life more meaningful".

Governor Babagana Zulum of Borno State criticized inefficiency and corruption in the current tax administration system.

Zulum, represented by the Deputy Governor of Borno State, Umar Kadafar, highlighted the shortcomings of the current tax system, including tax evasion, avoidance, and lack of transparency.

He called for critical reforms to address these issues, including tackling corruption in both the oil sector and governance system. He criticized the political protection of tax evaders and emphasized the importance of transparency and accountability in tax administration.

While calling for critical reforms, he lamented the manipulation and connivance of multinationals with tax administration to short-change the system, he added that this represented one of the hallmarks of corruption in both the oil and governance system.

In his remarks, the Governor of Sokoto State, Ahmad Aliyu Sokoto, said the conference will greatly assist in exploring innovative ways of improving revenue generation in the country.

He said the economic and revenue challenges had made it difficult for governments at all levels to implement their people-oriented programmes, thus the need for the government to devise a means for more funds to provide the dividends of democracy to the people.

The governor said taxation remained a veritable source of resource mobilization for the government adding that his administration would work with CITN to boost IGR in the state.

Insider trading; Abbey Mortgage Bank to part with N1.23m on mandatory compliance training

BY BONNY AMADI

Abbey Mortgage Bank Plc has been mandated by the capital market regulators and the NGX to attend a mandatory compliance training, over its latest allegations of insider trading while in closed period.

The NGX Exchange X-compliance had in a report, dated May 10, fingered Abbey Mortgage Bank for breach of insider trading rule, defaulting Rule 17-18, which governs the period of closure for trading activities by insiders who possess material, non-public information. Such periods are critical in maintaining market integrity and investor trust.

However, upon re-examination and considering the explanations provided by Abbey Mortgage Bank, the NGX concluded that the violation was not substantial enough to warrant a penalty.

But instead of a penalty, the NGX, thereafter mandated that Abbey Mortgage Bank attend a compliance training session, which is intended to ensure adherence to regulatory standards and further ensure the bank's commitment to best practices in corporate governance.

For the mandatory compliance training, this bank is to part with One million, two hundred and thirty thousand, and one hundred and eighty (1,230,180) naira, which in its report, highlights the NGX's commitment to education and compliance over punitive measures.

Resultantly, the issue of insider trading allegations brought against Abbey Mortgage Bank Plc during a closed period, as initially stated in the Nigerian Exchange's X-Compliance Report, has been brought to rest, following a review of the circumstances surrounding the case.

The initial report, dated May 10, had implied a breach of Rule 17-18, which governs the period of closure for trading activities by insiders who possess material, non-public information. Such periods are critical in maintaining market integrity and investor trust.

Abbey Mortgage Bank, a leader in the Nigerian mortgage sector since its incorporation in August 1992, has continually demonstrated resilience and stability. With strategic growth initiatives, such as the addition of a significant investor in 2020, the bank has shown remarkable progress, including a 250% increase in customer deposits from N6 billion to N21 billion in 2021 and shareholders' funds exceeding N8.5 billion.

This positive resolution highlights the importance of due process and the NGX's role in maintaining transparency while supporting the growth and integrity of listed companies. Abbey Mortgage Bank's proactive response and subsequent exoneration restores its reputation as a trusted and compliant financial institution, poised for continued success in the mortgage banking sector.

Convicted billionaire kidnapper, Evans, opts for plea bargain

The convicted billionaire kidnapper, Chukwudumeme Onwuamadike, popularly known as Evans and his co-defendant Joseph Emeda, charged with murder and attempted kidnap have opted for an option of plea bargain.

The state lead counsel, Mr Yusuf Sule, informed the court about the plea bargain option on Thursday when the case was called for re-arraignment.

The case was called for re-arraignment before Justice Adenike Colovers of an Ikofa High Court.

It would be recalled that Evans and his co-defendant were to be re-arraigned on an amended five-count charge bordering on murder, attempt to murder, conspiracy to commit felony to wit:

kidnapping and attempt to murder.

Sule informed the court that the case was for re-arraignment but he was aware the defendants had applied for a plea.

The prosecutor, however, said the plea bargain terms were being considered by the Attorney-General of Lagos State, Mr Lawal Pedro.

Alleged $6bn Fraud: Agunloye Loses Bid to Stop Prosecution

Justice Jude Onwuegbuzie of the Federal Capital Territory High, FCT, Court, sitting in Abuja, on Wednesday, May 15, 2024 dismissed a preliminary objection brought by ex-minister of Power and Steel, Olu Agunloye challenging the powers of the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission, EFCC to prosecute him.

Agunloye is facing prosecution by the EFCC on seven-count charges bordering on suspected fraudulent Mambilla Power Project contract awarded to the tune of $6billion (Six Billion US Dollars).

On February 8, 2024, Agunloye had through his counsel, Adeola Adedipe (SAN) filed a motion challenging the powers of the EFCC to investigate and prosecute him as well as that of the jurisdiction of the court to try him.

In response, prosecution counsel Abba Muhammed filed a counter affidavit, dated February 22, 2024, where he dismissed Agunloye's motion as incompetent and offensive to the provisions of Section 115(2) of the Evidence Act.

Delivering ruling on Wednesday, Justice Onwuegbuzie struck out Agunloye's motion for lack of merit and held that Section 6 and 7 of the EFCC Establishment Act, 2004 gave the Commission investigative and prosecutorial powers to cause investigation into any act of economic and financial crimes.

"On issues of whether the EFCC has the statutory power to investigate and prosecute before a court of competent jurisdiction, I have considered the application of the defence and the respondent, and I hold that the EFCC is charged with the investigation and prosecution of all economic and financial crimes including, contract scams, money laundering, advance fee fraud etc., including the investigation and enforcement of all economic and financial crimes laws, also cause investigation to whether an individual or company or anybody is likely to commit any crime.

Since the instant charges brought against the defendant are economic and financial crimes in nature, the motion brought by the defendant lacks merit and is hereby dismissed."

the judge ruled.

Regarding the legitimacy of the prosecution that the Commission obtained from the Office of the Auditor-General rather than that of the Attorney-General of the Federation (AGF), the judge held that any other state, authority or person was eligible to institute criminal prosecution in the absence of the AGF.

"Even if the charge has no seal of the Attorney-General of the Federation, that does not stop the potency of the charge, as the Attorney-General may decide on any member of his department, as ordered by the Attorney-General of Lagos State, Mr Lawal Pedro, that the matter till May 30, 2024 for continuation of trial.

The Drama at EFCC and the challenges with balance of justice

EQUITY and justice are the greatest need of our society. All are presumed to be equal before the law, but it is what it is, a presumption! The reality of our administration of justice has dug a gulf between the rich & the poor, the haves and the have nots, those who belong & those who don't. It is important and germane that our law enforcement agencies are better not blind to this reality! Magu and Olukeyede are testimonies of the need not just to belong to the party in power, but also to be seen as being loyal to members of the kitchen cabinet! Olukeyede learnt fast and struck the cord. No doubt, the zeal for work should be given to the lawyer in him, but his not being a trained investigator, is showing on the job! The Yahaya Bello drama is nothing but a piece of entertainment for Nigerians and the rest of the world. The burden of corruption on us as a nation is not as bad as the absence of equity and justice! It is sad that Donald Trump, the immediate past president of the United States who once again aspires to the highest office in that nation is presently in court to defend himself before the law! But Yahaya Bello, former governor of Kogi State finds it insulting to present himself before the law of Nigeria and answer to charges made by the EFCC against him and we are not losing our sleep! That action or implied action alone is an offence! Global perception on our determination to fight corruption should better be on the positive if we hope to win the discouraged hearts of foreign investors who though seduced by our numerous potentials can't put up with the impunity rapping justice in the open. The assignment before EFCC has gone beyond fighting corruption. It must include marketing our nation as a country of law & order. The burden of equity must be attended to, justice must be seen to be served. If Olukeyede's error of investigation is forgiven, that of law shouldn't be, easily! The withdrawal of the appeal against Yahaya Bello is too much of an error for the lawyer who is the chief executive of EFCC! IK Joy-Uzor, one of the many minds with whom mine regularly rubs with to better my concept on the Nigerian Project sent me his thoughts on this matter. Though we haven't met one on one, we have bonded so strongly through our desire for a better and greater Nigeria. On my chat with him on the Drama at EFCC, he had this to say: "We have had over 108 governors from 1999 till date. I use the figure 108 on the assumption that all governors have had two full terms which we know is not the case. Only about 2 of them (Joshua Dariye & Jolly Nyame) have been successfully jailed in Nigeria after EFCC prosecution. Diepiriye Alameyeseigha's time in EFCC detention counted towards his conviction and James Ibori was incarcerated abroad. Nyame and Dariye were both pardoned. Messrs Lucky Igbinedion & Orji Uzo Kalu respectively got a wrist smack and a court order for a retrial. My point being that it is impossible for just the aforementioned to be the only former governors that have embezzled. Let's not talk of the brigandage that goes on elsewhere." He continues: "I believe that our politicians and public office holders including administrators should be granted full amnesty. I believe that this 10th NASS should pass a law absolving these categories of people of all offences, including Yahaya Bello. After this is done another law should then be passed stating that henceforth anyone who commits such offences should be punished. This way we can get on with the business of doing serious governance and not this charade we have. We are too concerned -and without results from EFCC which seems to be compromised anyways- by the thefts that have gone on instead of safeguarding our future". Could Yahaya Bello have fallen out with BAT's kitchen cabinet because of his role in Buhari's? This is a possibility that must be inquired into, not by media hype and propaganda, but via thorough investigation! Once there is money to share, a criminal will have paid activists to speak for him, hungry lawyers, to protest and defend him and the abused and the depressed public, to sympathize with him! The Nigerian Public is presently mind sick owing to many years of rape and abuse by leadership! Olukeyede can't afford to be distracted from the fight against corruption to retreat into explaining the fight he is yet to win! Once the battle against corruption is won -though that is an impossibility so what is meant is token victories- he can come explaining the gain and sweetness of victory. The most important thing now is to disabuse the notion that Yahaya Bello is a victim of not belonging to the caucus in control of power. The only way to do that is to publish the names of all former Governors investigated by EFCC from 1999 to date! This of course may have the President listed, but neither Olukeyede nor the President need to be worried. The immunity that kept Yahaya will keep the President! Listing the President on such a list is the only way to answer the question of this Government's credibility and assure the world of our readiness to make a change!

The 2nd edition of GITEX AFRICA, from 29-31 May 2024 in the vibrant city of Marrakech, shall converge global leaders and experts, governments, businesses, big tech, start-ups, investors, and academia from 130 countries to catalyse partnerships and elevate the future ambitions of a continent determined to advance its entrepreneurial innovation economy.

Under the High Patronage of His Majesty King Mohammed VI of the Kingdom of Morocco, May God Assist Him, GITEX AFRICA is held under the authority of the Moroccan Ministry of Digital Transition and Administration Reform in partnership with the Digital Development Agency (ADD).

Africa's blockbuster tech showcase event is organised by KAOUIN International, the overseas affiliate of Dubai World Trade Centre (DWTC), which organises GITEX GLOBE in the UAE, the world's largest and most trusted tech and start-up event.

With the final preparations underway for a purpose-built mega venue in the heart of Marrakech, GITEX AFRICA 2024 will span 21 halls featuring 1,400 international exhibiting companies – a 70 percent year-on-year increase over the event's record-breaking debut 2023.

This is the year of the AI phenomenon and its tantalising all-purpose capabilities to transform diverse sectors, from cybersecurity, cloud and IoT, to finance, telecoms, agriculture, and education, amplifying hopes of greater prosperity in the world's second most populous continent. AI's impact on health tech has also spurred the launch of World Future Health Africa, accelerating the continent's ascending digital health revolution.

More than 700 of the most outstanding global start-ups from 45 countries, including 200 Moroccan start-ups, will also feature at GITEX AFRICA's North Star Africa start-up showcase, turbo-charging a great investment revival in a resilient and vibrant start-up ecosystem that is estimated to raise US$10 billion in VC funds by 2025.

These award-winning game-changers will connect with 350 investors from 35 countries with US$200 billion worth of assets under management. Now the premier opportunities digital transition provides for African countries. "Adding: 'This edition will further consolidate Morocco's position as a regional digital hub, thus creating an environment conducive to attracting more investments and stimulating job creation."

Ms. Ghita Mezour, Moroccan Minister of Digital Transition and Administration Reform; Sidi Mohammed Drissi Melyani, the General Director of ADD; and Tria LoMirmand, CEO of organiser KAOUIN International.

In attendance were GITEX AFRICA's official institutional partners: the ANRT (Moroccan National Telecommunications Regulatory Agency), ONDA (National Airports Office), OCP Royal Air Maroc, ONCF (Moroccan National Railway Office), and the General Confederation of Moroccan Enterprises (CGEM).

Tech leaders estimate the AI boom will add US$1.2 trillion to Africa's economy by 2030, boosting the continent's GDP by 5.6 percent, and accelerating the need for urgent digital discourses to deploy the shape shifting tech that is both sustainable and ethical.

Trixie LoMirmand, CEO of KAOUIN International, said: "The recent developments in AI have created new opportunities and impetus for Africa in its digital transformation mission."

This shall empower the continent with new strategies and solutions for the betterment of society."

Government ministers,

Malaria: Do MDAs contribute to transmission through their activities?

By Vivian hechu

Malaria is endemic in Nigeria and a leading cause of death in many countries. Children and pregnant women are the most affected groups.

To achieve more significant progress in the fight against malaria in Nigeria, analysts believe that there should be changes in approach.

According to Dr Akpaka Kalu, there is also the need to adopt technologies to look at how best to maximise investment efficiency and impact.

Kalu is the Team Lead, Strategic Planning and Policy, Communicable and Non Communicable Cluster (IHC/CND), World Health Organisation (WHO), African Region.

Kalu argues that activities of Ministries, Departments and Agencies (MDAs) contribute to malaria transmission.

"To make more impact in the war against malaria, there is a need to rethink of our model and adopt technologies to look at how best to maximise investment efficiency and impact.

"We need to do more and achieve more with available resources, and it is possible because technology is available, resources are limited.

"We have the motivation to maximise technology to also maximise efficiency of our investment.

"We also need to leverage resources from the private sector and non-health sector," he advises.

Kalu argues that some MDAs, in carrying out their activities, contribute to transmission of malaria.

"For instance, ministries of works are involved in road constructions. When they are doing those road constructions, the earthworks they do, create breeding sites.

"Ministries of works may not know that they are aiding in transmission of malaria through their very good initiatives," he argues.

The team lead also points out that, in the mining sector, the Federal Ministry of Mines, when digging grounds during dry season, leaves them open, and during rainy season, mosquitoes breed on the mining sites and transmit malaria.

"The Ministry of Mines also needs to know that it contributes to malaria transmission."

"Even in the agriculture sector, through irrigation projects, you move water to where there was no water and you expand the potential for breeding of mosquitoes that transmit malaria.

"Therefore, irrigation projects also lead to an increase in malaria transmission," he says.

Kalu is convinced that such projects should pass through the ministry of health for necessary approvals to safeguard the health of the citizens.

"They all need to work with the ministry of health to understand how they are contributing to malaria transmission and what they should do to help in malaria control as well as invest their resources to control malaria.

"That way, you are improving domestic finance for malaria by leveraging resources from the mining sector that messes up malaria control, the works sector that messes up malaria control and even the agriculture sector that is busy working on irrigation projects.

"There are many non-health sectors that contribute to malaria through their good initiatives; that is why we do health impact assessment," he says.

According to Kalu, if health impact assessment is not done before approval for such projects, the defaulting MDAs should be made to present their containment strategies.

According to him, by doing so, the MDAs will be made to see their contributions to malaria transmission and be made accountable and ensure they commit to malaria control measures.

"If they did, then, they must have been told this irrigation project would lead to an increase in malaria transmission."

"Therefore, before we approve this irrigation project, you need to give us a plan for control of malaria. That is what to do.

"In fact, it should be law that no industry, no factory, no construction, no irrigation project should be approved without the signature of the minister of health, because health is at the centre of development.

"We are not saying you shouldn't have irrigation projects, we are not saying you should not build roads. We are saying that you should have containment measures in place," he says.

The team lead believes that leveraging resources from the private sector and non-health sector to fight malaria is helpful.

Kalu adds that efforts from private and non-health sectors to fight malaria can be incentivized.

He emphasises that donations from private and non health sectors toward malaria eradication should be tied to impact.

"What I think we need to do is to launch a scheme such as: Adopt a district, adopt a local government area and make it malaria-free."

"For instance, if you identify malaria high-risk districts or LGAs, you define what needs to be done to make those districts/LGAs malaria-free.

"Then, you develop investment or incentive packages for the private sector.

"You can say, Bank A, you have a branch in this local government area. If you can invest this much, you will contribute to making this LGA malaria-free.

"You can give you these incentives - for instance, you can paint all the hospitals in this area your bank's colour, we give you tax rebates, you put up a billboard in the LGA."

"These are some ways to go. They call them thinking malaria," Kalu asserts.

Family planning and the myth of promoting promiscuity

BY VICTOR ADEOTI

My husband prevented me from taking up family planning after the birth of our third child. He said I will be promiscuous, if he allows me to undertake it.

"But after the birth of our fourth child, I took the family planning method without his knowledge.

"I did this to preserve my life because of his too much demand for sex," says Mrs Bironeke Adekunle, at Asubiaro Family Planning Unit in Osogbo where is undergoing her procedure.

Bironeke's experience is one out of many other experiences of women whose husbands were not allowed to undergo family planning methods due to misconceptions.

Family planning experts are of the opinion that due to misconceptions and myths about family planning, most men, especially in the rural areas, do defy unplanned pregnancy risks and stop their wives to embrace the family planning methods.

These men are of the opinion that family planning will give their wives licence to start having sexual affairs with other men since they cannot get pregnant.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) defines family planning as the ability of individuals and couples to anticipate and attain their desired number of children and the spacing and timing of their births.

According to the organisation, family planning serves three critical needs; helps couples avoid unplanned pregnancies, reduces the spread of sexually transmitted diseases and reduces the rate of infertility.

The organisation also says that the use of contraception advances the human right of people to determine the number and spacing of their children.

However, in spite of misconception of promiscuity about family planning methods, WHO says the number of women desiring to use family planning has increased over the past two decades from 900 million in 2000 to nearly 1.1 billion in 2021.

The UN agency also says that between 2000 and 2020, the number of women using modern contraceptive methods increased from 663 million to 851 million while an additional 70 million women are projected to join by 2030.

Therefore, the question posed by family planning observers is: does the procedure truly make women to be promiscuous?

Medical experts think otherwise. Instead, they say, it gives husband and wife the opportunity to plan and space their children for a healthy living.

According to them, promiscuity itself is a character or attitude of an individual, whether they take up family planning or not.

Mrs Olofade Abatan, Family Planning Coordinator, Osun Ministry of Health, says the family planning method does not allow women to be promiscuous.

According to her, family planning is for the effective management of the home and the well-being of women.

"This orientation that men have that women become promiscuous after taking up family planning methods is not correct.

"We are talking to our men to support our women to take up family planning."

"We are educating our men that family planning is to ensure that there is peace, understanding and collaboration between husband and wife.

"Family planning allows for peace in the home and not a licence for women to be promiscuous.

"We are always happy whenever we see men who follow their wives to take up family planning in our facilities.

"It shows that they care about the welfare of the wives," she said.

Abatan said that myth, misconception, lack of access, medical barriers, and knowledge, among others, were some of the barriers to family planning.

2023/2024 season: X-raying Nigerian footballers' performances in Europe

BY KAYODE ADEBIYI

In a matter of days, the curtain will fall on many domestic football leagues in Europe, where many of the players are also expected to join up with their national teams for EURO 2024.

The football leagues in Germany, England, France, Spain and Italy – known as Europe's top five – have reached various concluding stages.

While the German Bundesliga will end on May 18, French Ligue 1 and the English Premier League (EPL) will be concluded the next day.

The Spanish La Liga and the Italian Serie A will be concluded on May 24 and May 26 respectively.

Every season, clubs in these and other leagues in Europe have captivated football enthusiasts all over the world, including in Nigeria, where fans look forward to watching their compatriots lighting up stadiums across Europe.

For decades, Nigerian footballers have been playing their trade in European clubs, and a spectacular or decent season by these players adds to the excitement of football fans back home.

The EPL

There are eight Nigerians currently playing in the EPL – two each at Nottingham Forest, Brentford, Fulham and Luton Town.

While it seems like Taiwo Awoniyi and Ola Aina will escape relegation with Forest this season, the duo of Femi Ojindana and Gabriel Osho is almost certain to go down with Luton Town.

However, injuries made it a season to forget for Awoniyi, who, so far, has managed six goals and three assists, unlike last season when he helped his team to stay up.

Alex Iwobi and Calvin Bassey were regular starters for 14th-placed Fulham throughout the season.

Brentford, who are 16th on the log, are guaranteed Premier League football next season, thanks partly to Frank Onyeka's enterprising midfield display all-season.

As for U-20 player Benjamin Fredrick, hopefully, he gets his breakthrough into Brentford's first team next season.

In the English Football League (EFL) Championship, Will Ndidi flourished under Italian Enzo Maresca and played a crucial role in Leicester City gaining promotion to the EPL.

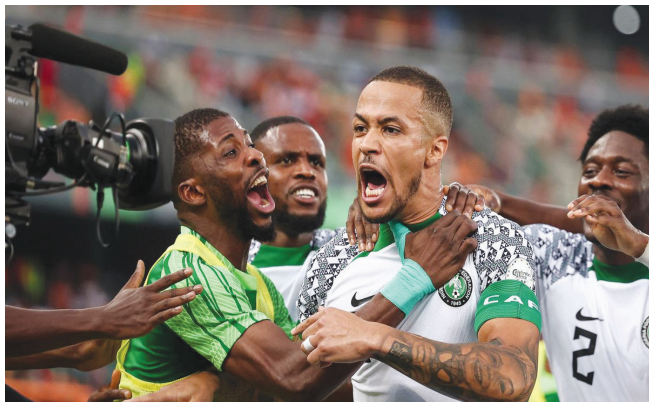

His compatriot, Kelechi Iheanacho, has so far scored five goals and one assist, statistics believed to be a below-par performance for his newly promoted side. If Southampton win the Championship playoffs, then Joe Arbo will join Ndidi and Iheanacho in the EPL next season.

Bundesliga

The biggest talking point in German football this season is how Bayer 04 Leverkusen have won the Bundesliga for the first time in their 115-year history.

For Nigerians, the second-greatest highlight is how the 23-year-old Nigerian striker, Victor Boniface, took the league by storm in his debut season.

In spite of an injured adductor laying him off for months, Boniface scored 13 goals and eight assists in 22 league games and had been nominated for the Bundesliga Rookie of the Season award.

Boniface's compatriot and teammate, Nathan Tella, is also enjoying a good season at Leverkusen, so far scoring five goals and two assists from the midfield in the process.

Boniface and Tella could end the season with a treble, as Leverkusen are still in contention for the Europa League and German Cup trophies.

Serie A

Twelve Nigerians are playing professional football in Italy's elite division.

Reigning African Footballer of the Year, Victor Osimhen, hasn't been able to replicate his scorching goal-scoring form of last season, which saw him spearhead the title run of his Italian club Napoli.

However, he is still a prolific striker in Serie A, so far scoring 15 goals and three assists in 24 matches in a season Napoli are sitting in ninth position.

Atalanta's winger, Ademola Lookman is having a decent season, which could see his side end up with a trophy when they meet Leverkusen in the Europa League final.

He has scored nine goals and six assists in 29 appearances for fifth-placed Atalanta who are poised for European football next season.

After a slow start to life at Serie A, former Villarreal winger, Samuel Chukwueke seems to be settling in gradually at his new home AC Milan.

With second-placed Rossonari guaranteed Champions League football next season, Chukwueke will look to improve in his sophomore season.

Internazionale's Ebenezer Akinsamiro hasn't been involved in many of their Serie A games this season, same as Salernitana's Simeon Nwanwo and Genoa's David Ankeye.

Nwanwo's teammate, Chukwuibike Ikweemesi and Udinese attacker, Isaac Success, have had significant playing times for their various clubs but with few goal returns.

Former Super Eagles first-choice goalkeeper, Maduka Okoye has made 19 appearances for Udinese this season and has kept four clean sheets.

David Ankeye (Genoa), Tyrone Ebuehi (Empoli), David Okereke (Torino), and Victor Eletu (AC Milan) have only played sparingly for their respective clubs this season.

La Liga

There are only two Nigerians in the Spanish top division.

Umar Sadiq has made 26 appearances for Real Sociedad this season, scoring three goals and one assist.

However, Sadiq's last La Liga appearance came on April 21 in a 1-1 draw versus Getafe; a match that he played 22 minutes.

Granada's Eghosa Bello is the second Nigerian playing in La Liga. However, the attacker has not made any league appearance since joining the club in January.

Granada are already relegated regardless of what happens in the rest of the season.

Ligue 1

Teremas Moffi (Nice), Akor Adams (Montpellier), Gift Orban (Olympique Lyonnais), Bonke Innocent (Lorient) and Moses Simon (Nantes) are the five Nigerian players in Ligue 1.

Moffi has appeared for Nice 28 times, scoring 11 goals and two assists to make him his club's top scorer and joint-eighth in the league.

Adams has also featured for Montpellier 31 times this season, netting eight goals and his club's second-top scorer in the league, while Moses, with 22 appearances for Nantes this term, has scored three goals so far.

However, Orban has just 13 league appearances – mostly as a substitute – with only a goal to show while Innocent has been involved in only four Ligue 1 matches so far for Lorient.

Other European leagues

Over 20 Nigerians are playing in the Czech Liga, including Igho Ogbu, Mohamed Tjani and Ubong Ekpai, all playing for Slavia Prague. Victor Olanuji plays for Sparta Prague.

Two Nigerians play for Chaves in the Portuguese Primeira Liga – attacker Kelечи Nwakali and defender Junior Plus.

While Nwakali has scored one goal and four assists, Plus has yet to play a league game this season.

Zaidu Sanusi has appeared five times for FC Porto this season, but Boavista's Chidozie Awaziem has appeared for his side 27 times this season.

Awaziem's teammate, left-back Bruno Onyemachi has featured 31 times for Boavista this season.

In Belgium, the Jupiler Pro League has 10 Nigerian footballers playing for Genk (5), Antwerp (3), Sporting Charleroi (1) and Club Brugge (1).

However, the majority of these players do not enjoy playing time in their respective clubs. For instance, at Genk, only Jordan Torunarigha has made meaningful appearances this season.

He has been selected in the starting XI 27 times and made three substitute appearances, while Ahmed Abdullahi, Toluwalese Arokodare, Christian Akpan, and Yira Sor have been largely inactive.

An analysis of media content shows that, except for a few, the majority of Nigerian players playing their trade in Europe played fringe roles in the season that is about to end.

However, these players have exported the flair and athleticism which had been the hallmark of Nigerian football.

Their playing styles have gone a long way in influencing the various leagues globally.

Similarly, their presence in those football leagues offered a wider pool for coaches to select the players to represent the country in various competitions on the global stage.
