A News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) correspondent who visited Alaba, Ajlbad and Agbalata ram markets in Badagry reports that the cost of rams varies.

At Alaba ram market a big ram is sold for N750,000, a medium-sized ram costs between N350,000 and N400,000 while a small ram is sold between N150,000 and N200,000.

Democracy Day: Nigeria needs to strengthen LGs, electoral reforms – S/East Stakeholders

As Nigeria marks her 25 years of democracy, some analysts in the South East have expressed mixed reactions to the progress made so far by current and successive governments in the country.

While some people expressed satisfaction with the progress made so far, others viewed differently saying that there was not much on ground to show for any improvement.

Prince Chris Azor, Chairman, Anambra Civil Society Network (ACSNSN) et) said that Nigeria made significant progress in consolidating its democracy, with six successful presidential elections since the return to civilian rule in 1999.

According to him, Chief Ousegun Obasanjo was supported to become president (1999-2007) from the Zone that produced Abiola.

"There was electoral reform which produced the new electoral Act, 2022. "However, there are still challenges to overcome, such as ensuring free and fair elections, strengthening institutions, and addressing socio-economic issues, restructuring national peace and coexistence."

Azor, who is also the President, International

Peace and Civic Responsibility Centre (IPCRC), noted with dismay that the conduct of the 2023 general elections left much to be desired, with so much controversy and contestations. "There's need for total renewal in Nigeria for desired healing, cohesion and nation building," the activist said.

Dr George Akubue, a

Senior Lecturer at the Institute of African Studies, University of Nigeria Nsukka (UNN), said it was undisputed that the education sector had experienced democracy dividends that helped to increase access to education in the country.

Alabue explained that the Federal Government's

No plan to revoke licenses of Wema, Polaris, Unity, Fidelity Banks – CBN

BY BONNY AMADI

The Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN), has said that there is no plan to revoke the operating licenses of Fidelity, Wema, Polaris and Unity Banks.

fals. She also noted that a circular issued by CBN on January 10, 2024, notifying the public about the dissolution of the Boards of Union, Keystone, and Polaris Banks, was being re-circulated as though it were issued on June 10, 2024.

"She blamed unscrupulous people for the development aimed at creating panic in the system.

Secretary of Obong of Calabar Traditional Rulers Council seeking a declaration that the recognition given to Eubom Ekpo Okon Abasi as the Obong of Calabar by the Cross River State Government at the Public through a statement signed by the Governor, press Secretary is a violation of the Supreme Court Judgement that dethroned him as the Obong of Calabar on 23/1/23 and Claim that since after that, the Obong of Calabar Stool remains Vacant unless a fresh conclave selection process is put in place.

According to the Counsel to the three claimants, Barrister Eric Ifere told the media in Calabar that they decided to approach the Court to restrain the defendant, Eubom Ekpo Okon Abasi from further paraded himself as the Obong of Calabar because the Supreme Court have given a decision against him to subjects himself for a fresh screening process.

Alleged N423bn Fraud: EFCC raises team to probe ex-Governor El-Rufai, others

The Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC) has raised a team of operatives to probe alleged mismanagement of N423 billion by former Kaduna State Governor Nasir El-Rufai and some key members of his government.

It was learnt that the former governor will soon be invited for questioning, reports The Nation. Others slated for interrogation are those who served as Finance commissioners from May 29, 2015, to May 29, 2023; all the accountants-general in the eight years that his administration lasted and the chairmen of the Kaduna State Internal Revenue Service (KADIRS) from 2018 to 2023.

Others are all the managing directors of the Kaduna Market Development and Management Company Ltd from May 29, 2015, to May 29, 2023; and all the Managing Directors of Kaduna Roads Agency (KADRA) from October 11, 2017, to November 2021 except Amina Ja'afar Ladan, an engineer who spent only one month in office.

More revelations have been made on the alleged corruption during El-Rufai's tenure.

The Ad-Hoc Committee of the Kaduna House of Assembly uncovered that about N423,115,028,072.88 was siphoned from the coffers of the state government from 2015 to 2023.

It also spotted a cumulative withdrawal of $1.4 million from the Kaduna State Economic Transformation Account.

The House panel has asked eight people and companies to refund N19, 239, 511,099.76.

It has also recommended that 15 contractors should refund N36, 351,126,811.65 as "being monies paid for work either not done, overpayment or diversion."

The committee said that although the value of contracts awarded from 1999 to 2023 by El-Rufai's administration was N511,407,166,975.93, it only paid N198,921,880,169.04 to contractors.

Investigations by our correspondent showed that a Special Task Force was assigned to look into a petition by a Non-Governmental Organisation mainly on the findings of the Kaduna State House of Assembly.

It was learnt that the team immediately swung into action yesterday for a review and isolation of the allegations against the ex-governor, some past commissioners and aides.

A top source, who spoke with our correspondent, said: "We are in receipt of a petition from the NGO, so we have started investigation in the matters raised in the petition.

"The report of the Ad-Hoc Committee of the Kaduna State House of Assembly is also handy. We will soon invite El-Rufai and some members of his team for interrogation.

The Special Task Force on Monday (yesterday) held a long session on the contents of the petition and the report of the Ad-Hoc Committee.

The source added: "The report of the House of Assembly has actually laid a solid foundation for the probe by our team."

EFCC Head of Media and Publicity, Mr. Dele Oyejale, was unavailable to respond to our correspondent's enquiries last night.

But there were revelations in the report of the Ad-Hoc Committee that were not in the public domain.

Universal Basic Education Commission (UBEC) was a democracy dividend in the education sector that helped to increase access and school enrollments as well as reduce illiteracy in the country in the past 29 years.

"Because of UBE, many children are able to have access to primary and secondary school as well as gain admission to higher institutions."

"This UBE also helped to increase enrollments in primary, secondary and higher institutions.

"For instance, in the past five years, the number of candidates writing the Unified Tertiary Matriculation Exam (UTME) has hit over 1.5 million because of the establishment of more public and private tertiary institutions by the government that increased access to education.

"If you check the number of primary, secondary and higher institutions both public and private, you will discover a serious increase in number that has resulted in more access and enrollments in schools.

"To me, this is a big democracy dividend in education," he said.

The don however, urged the government to increase funding of the education sector in order to achieve better quality that would enable graduates produced in the country to compete favourably with their counterparts globally.

He advised the government to pay good salaries to teachers at all levels of education as well as avert all forms of misunderstanding with labour unions in public universities that had constantly disrupted academic calendar and prolonged students' graduation in the past.

The Speaker, Anambra State House of Assembly, Dr. Sonto-chukwu Udezue, said that the gains of democracy over other forms of government could not be overemphasized.

He said that from 1999 till date, successive democratic governments had really tried in involving the led in their administrations unlike the military rule where only few individuals were given the opportunity to serve the military interest.

Udezue said, "Yes, that democracy has continued to yield dividends to Nigerians in many ways. We have improved in our democracy an inversed rule of law and respect for humanity.

He said virtually all the sectors of the nation's economy were reasonably thriving, no matter the pace.

However, he said that the country was yet to actualize full democracy and called on the key players to show more commitment and dedication to ensure that the people enjoyed full democracy.

"They should place the interest and well being of the masses who recently attacked and killed some soldiers in the town.

On May 30 that hoodlums suspected to be enforcing a sit-at-home exercise during Biafra Heroes Day Celebration killed five soldiers at Obikajal junction checkpoint.

The Nigerian Defence Headquarters subsequently declared that it would crush the insidious Peoples of Biafra and its militant arm, Eastern Security Network in the state.

Since the incident, there have been reports of young men and women wounded by military personnel.

Protesting at the Government House on Tuesday, the traders accused the military of laying siege to the town, saying it was affecting businesses.

The traders, who were mainly from Ngwa Road Market in Aba, said they are tired of the siege was destroying their businesses and worsening hunger.

Led by the President of the Traders' Association, Chinedu Ofondu, the traders who displayed placards, some of which read: "We are tired of staying at home", "We have no access to our shops any more", "Our shops are under siege", "Our dear Governor, please help us."

They pleaded with the state government to prevail on the military to allow them reopen their shops or they will die of hunger.

Ofondu lamented that they have been unable to access their shops since the incident, adding that the situation had taken a toll on them and their families. "Our shops are under siege by the military since May 30. We don't have access to our shops again. Hunger is dealing with us. Governor, please come to our rescue," he said.

Also speaking, the Secretary of the traders' union, Mr. Ikenna Okonkwo, said they were frustrated by the situation and in need of the government's help.

He expressed sorrow and frustration that the incident where soldiers lost their lives occurred far away from the market, and questioned why innocent traders were being punished for something they had no involvement in.

Responding, the Special Adviser to the Governor on Trade, Commerce and Industry, Chief Nwaka Inem assured the traders that he would convey their grievances to the governor.

Inem pleaded with them to remain calm.

He noted that though unprompted attacks on the military usually come with collateral damage, something worse might have happened but for the way Governor Oti handled the situation.

He urged the traders to assist the government with any useful information that could lead to the arrest of the killers of the soldiers, stating that the state government had even raised the bounty put on the heads of the perpetrators from N25 million to N30 million to demonstrate the government's commitment in apprehending the culprits.

above every other consideration and shun corruption of any kind.

Other respondents still view the issue differently saying that Nigerians are yet to enjoy the dividends of democracy in 25 years of democratic rule in Nigeria. Mr Vincent Ezekweume, says the political class are yet to provide dividends of democracy to the populace in the last 25 years of democratic rule in Nigeria.

Ezekweume, who is the Chairman of Civil Liberties Organisation (CLO) in Anambra, highlighted insecurity, hike in prices of goods and services, unemployment and the removal of fuel subsidy as some of the major challenges the masses were contending with.

He said: "You can see how prices of goods and services have skyrocketed, insecurity and unemployment among other ills and evils in the country is widespread.

"Most worrisome, with the removal of fuel subsidy in Nigeria,

Planned June 12 Protests Designed with Sinister Objectives –Nigeria's DSS

Nigeria's secret police, Department of State Services (DSS) has warned citizens against planned protests on Wednesday, June 12, Democracy Day.

The government had earlier declared Wednesday as public holiday to celebrate Democracy Day.

In a press statement issued by the DSS Director, PR & Strategic Communications, Peter Afunanya, on Wednesday, the secret police alleged that some non-state actors were planning to cause violence in certain parts of the country under the guise of engaging in peaceful protests.

The Nigerian civil societies, including the Take-It-Back Movement, African Action Congress party, and others, have planned a mass nationwide protest on June 12 against hardship and hunger under President Bola Tinubu's government.

They blame the removal of the fuel subsidy for the skyrocketing prices of goods and services, making life unaffordable for average Nigerians. The groups accuse the government and its associates of corruption and living in luxury while citizens suffer.

They urged Nigerians to join the peaceful protest to demand systemic change and reclaim their country from exploitative elites.

However, the DSS urged Nigerians to go about their business without fear of being attacked, adding that its personnel would collaborate with other security agencies to protect lives and property nationwide.

The statement reads, "The attention of the Department of State Services (DSS) has been drawn to plans by certain individuals and groups to stage physical protests in some parts of the country on 12th June, 2024.

"The protests are designed with sinister objectives to coincide with the Democracy Day Celebration. While citizens may have the rights of assembly and expression, such freedoms should not be used to undermine public safety and national security.

"The determination by some non-state actors to incite mass disaffection through demonstrations that may turn violent will not be tolerated. However, it is instructive to note that violent demonstrations are at variance with the peaceful disposition of the Federal Government to amicably address all contentions including the minimum wage.

"Citizens are, therefore, called upon to resist any persuasions to be lawless or cause disorder and anarchy in the nation. Displeased persons are rather encouraged to appropriately channel their grievances through the right channels and procedures.

"Consequently, the DSS reaffirms its unequivocal position to protect the country from inimical acts being orchestrated by disgruntled groups to cause a breakdown of law and order. It will also sustain collaboration with all relevant stakeholders, including security agencies, to maintain the peace as well as protect lives and property across the nation. Law abiding citizens are enjoined to go about their businesses without fear.

"The Service, while facilitating the government and citizens on this auspicious occasion of celebrating 25 years of unbroken democracy, calls for continued patriotism, unity and commitment in building a Nigeria of our collective dream.

"Meanwhile, the DSS website, emailaddress@ds.gov.ng, emailaddress@ds.gov.ng and +2349153391309; +2349088373514 remain open to the public in the event that there is need to contact it," it added.

Sallah: Badagry ram sellers lament low sales amid high prices

million as the cost of transporting his rams from Sokoto State.

"I have to add the money to the price of the rams before selling them to make profit.

"I came to Alaba market with 300 rams since June 5, as of today I have not sold up to ten rams.

"Buyers have been coming to ask for the price of a ram, promising that they will come, but I have not seen them.

"In 2023, I thought that the prices of rams were expensive, but that of this year is just too much.

"The prices wouldn't have been this high if not for the removal of fuel subsidy that led to the high cost of transport," he said.

In Aljibade ram market, Aradagun, Mr. Belawu Ajadi, said that the cost of feeding and transporting the rams to the market all added up to the high price.

"Customers come here in trickles to buy their rams for the Sallah, but compared to 2023, the sales are very dull.

"In 2023, as at this time, I had sold over 50 rams, but now I have just sold 10.

"The economic hardships in the country have affected the sales this year, but I still have hope that customers will still come to buy," he said.

"Meanwhile, buyers lamented the increase in cost of the rams.

Mr. Yusuf Ajadi, a buyer at Alaba market, said the prices of rams had doubled compared to how it was sold last year.

"In 2023, I bought two rams here for N280,000, one for N130,000, another for N150,000, but unfortunately today I bought one medium size for N400,000. I can't afford to buy two this year.

"If I have to buy two rams, I have to add another N100,000, making N500,000 to buy two this year. This is more than twice the amount I bought in 2023," he said.

No plan to revoke licenses of Wema, Polar, Unity, Fidelity Banks – CBN

members of the banking public of the safety of their deposits and the banking system's resilience.

The Ag Director emphasised that Heritage's case was isolated, adding that allegations of further revocation of licenses prior to the completion of the bank recapitalisation exercise were mere fabrications of those who didn't wish the banking sector well.

She added that even customers of Heritage Bank needn't worry about the safety of their deposits, adding that the Nigeria Deposit Insurance Corporation (NDIC) had commenced payment of the bank's insured deposits.

Sidi Ali, therefore, urged the public to continue their regular banking activities without concern, dismissing any false reports regarding the health of specific Deposit Money Banks.

She confirmed that the CBN, with its robust regulatory framework, was proactively ensuring the stability of Nigeria's financial system, thereby guaranteeing the safety of depositors' funds in all Nigerian financial institutions.

While reiterating the assurances of the Governor (Olayemi Cardoso) that the recapitalisation of banks in Nigeria was intended to bolster the banking system and safeguard the sector against risks, Sidi Ali urged all stakeholders to cooperate in ensuring the success of the process, which she noted would be for the overall growth of the Nigerian economy.

According to her, "Without prejudice to the ongoing recapitalisation process, I want to restate that the Nigerian banking industry remains resilient. Key financial soundness indicators remain within current regulatory thresholds.

"Customers are, therefore, encouraged to proceed with their transactions as usual, as the CBN is committed to ensuring the safety of the banking system."

Johnston stated that following the completion of the transaction, Guinness Nigeria would remain listed on the Nigerian Stock Exchange Ltd.

She added that subject to regulatory approvals, Tolaram intends to launch a mandatory takeover offer in compliance with local law requirements.

"Today's announcement represents a significant opportunity for the next phase of growth for Guinness Nigeria.

"This partnership brings together Tolaram's deep expertise in manufacturing and distribution, and Diageo's exceptional capabilities in brand building and innovation.

"I believe this is a winning combination which leaves Guinness Nigeria extremely well placed to drive further growth in this market," she said.

Adebayo Alli, Managing Director, Guinness Nigeria, said the announcement marked an exciting moment for Guinness Nigeria, its employees and customers.

Alli expressed readiness to work alongside Tolaram, which was described as one of the largest and most respected consumer goods companies in Africa.

"I am pleased to note Tolaram's alignment with Guinness Nigeria's values and its strong commitment to build an enduring and sustainable business," Alli said.

Hareesh Aswani, Managing Director, Tolaram Africa, said the group was thrilled to welcome Tolaram, a company with rich legacy and strong consumer loyalty into its ecosystem.

Aswani said the strategic move would expand the company's significant footprint in the Nigerian market and presented an opportunity to leverage their combined strengths to foster innovation and deliver immense value to customers and shareholders.

Tolaram is one of the largest consumer packaged goods companies on the continent.

Circular Economy Models as E-Waste Management Strategy

INTRODUCTION

In today's world, e-business and e-economy are booming industries, but with that growth comes a significant downside: the rise of e-waste. This term defines any electrical and IT devices that are no longer used or have been rendered unusable by technological advancements. Consumer electronics, computers, and other communication and electrical products have significantly become the driving force to the global concerns of e-waste. The proliferation of computing and communication devices, along with other electrical goods, is largely responsible for the global surge in e-waste (Boubellouta and Kusch-Brandt, 2021). Think of old PCs, TVs, smartphones, and more—all contributing to this mounting issue. E-waste comes in many forms, from PCs and smartphones to smartphones and printers, and it's typically divided into two categories: Information Technology (IT) and Consumer Electronics (CE). The challenge with e-waste lies in its disposal. While IT products often have components that can be salvaged and reused, the same isn't true for many CE items. They often lack the economic incentive for recycling and end up being dumped, posing environmental risks. So, while there's potential value in salvaging components from IT products, the CE category presents a more complex problem—one that requires innovative solutions to minimize its negative impact on the environment.

E-waste and Global Impact

E-waste is one of the fastest-growing categories of waste (Awasthi et al., 2018). The substantial accumulation of electronic waste (e-waste) from post-consumer electronic devices has sparked apprehension regarding its hazardous implications. In 2016 alone, the global generation of e-waste amounted to an estimated 44.7 million metric tonnes, as reported by Baldé et al. (2017). United States generates the second highest amount of Waste from Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) after China with a generation rate of 6.9 MT/year and per capita generation of around 19-20 kg/person/year (Shittu, Williams, and Shaw 2021). This implies that with the increase in the WEEE generation rate, toxic metals and other hazardous substances will be emitted more into the environment, and at the same time, valuable resources will be consumed more which would increase the need to recycle and recover them (Zeng et al. 2016). Unfortunately, only 20% of the total E-waste is collected and recycled.

E-waste and Sustainable Development

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was adopted in September 2015 by the United Nations and its member states. The agenda included 17 Sustainable Development Goals and 169 targets to end poverty, protect the planet, and ensure prosperity in the world. It is related to SDG 3, to improve public health and well-being, as E-waste contains many hazardous substances and toxic constituents. The effects of material extraction and increased mining operations pose significant health and environmental impacts (Meloni et al., 2018). Huge amounts of water and energy are used for mining and manufacturing of electronic devices and the demand for resources increases the chance of unsafe working conditions. Improper handling and recycling methods can also increase public exposure to toxic chemicals and hazardous substances.

Circular Economy Models

E-waste generation and its management is a serious issue worldwide, especially in developing countries. We need to tackle the e-waste issue from various sectors to not only deal with its harmful effects on the environment and human health but also to support the global economy and conserve resources sustainably. It's about finding a balance between the negative impacts of recycling e-waste and the allocation of resources.

The concept of a circular economy offers a promising solution by aiming to slow down the consumption of electrical and electronic equipment (EEE) through smarter product design and business models. This approach, advocated by Ali and Shirazi (2023), involves the "7 R's" system: reducing, reusing, refusing, recycling, recovering, rethinking, and redesigning.

Conclusion
The circular economy goal is to reduce waste by making products more efficient and finding ways to recycle materials so they can be used again. It's all about finding smarter, more sustainable ways to manage resources.

This ensures they remain in use for as long as possible, preserving their utility and value (Ellen MacArthur Foundation, 2019). While the concept of a circular economy is considered crucial for the generation and management of e-products, it necessitates a collaborative effort across various sectors, including businesses, governments, and consumers (Henriques et al., 2023). Mr. Oreolorun Titobiloluwa Oluwayomi, the founder of Justusedtech, aims to build a society where a circular economy is encouraged by reusing devices and also upcycling them to build a digital divide. He believes that a circular economy can be a great tool for eradicating the ever-growing problem of e-waste in the world.

Nigeria's 12 oil bid round will be transparent - FG

Mr George Komolafe, the Chief Executive of the commission, gave the assurance on Tuesday during the 2024 Pre-bid conference in Lagos.

The theme of the conference is, 'Unveiling Nigerian Energy Development Strategies: 2024 Licensing Round'.

He said that the bid would be in accordance with Section 76 (1) of the Petroleum Industry Act (PIA).

Komolafe said that Nigeria is an attractive jurisdiction for investment, adding that the country has a stable regime, driven by laws.

According to him, Nigeria is a stable political environment that encourages business in a conducive atmosphere.

The 2024 bidding round is meant for investors with financial capacity and technical competence.

In the past, the award of oil blocks culminated to the non-development of over 90 per cent of marginal fields, thus denying the federal government of reaping the intended benefits.

"This is because such awards were not based on technical and financial considerations," he said.

The NNPC boss said that the recent Presidential Executive Orders issued were aimed at improving the efficiency and attractiveness of Nigeria's oil and gas sector.

He said that it would culminate in further increasing the nation's oil and gas reserves.

He added that as at April, it was estimated that Nigeria's oil reserve was at 37.5 billion barrels of crude oil and condensate reserves, and 209.26 trillion cubic feet of natural gas reserves.

He said that the commission had engaged in several meetings, held in Houston US, Miami London and Paris, among others.

"We are not just a regulator, but a business enabler. We urge stakeholders to participate in the exercise."

"It will enable us unprecedented opportunity to unlock Nigeria's vast hydrocarbon potential, attract investment and propel our nation towards greater economic prosperity and shared prosperity," he stated.

He said each block had been chosen for its potential to bolster the nation's reserve and economic stability.

Komolafe said that the total number of blocks were 12 at planning stage.

"But they were later able to gather data to offer more blocks. So it is increasing the number of blocks and the details will be made available on the portal," Komolafe said.

The NNPC boss also said that the commission had issued a licensing guideline and published the general plan.

Komolafe said that the blocks offer have extensive 2D and 3D seismic coverage including logic and analog data.

According to him, the objective of the exercise are to grow oil gas reserves, to boost production, to enhance Nigerian content development and attract investment among others.

He told prospective investors that notwithstanding the progression of energy transition, fossil fuel would continue to play a key role in the energy provider globally.

The NNPC boss also said that there were plans to also conduct the 2022 block auctions alongside the 2024 oil bid round, while it had offered seven oil blocks in 2022.

Democracy Day: X-raying President Tinubu's 4-D foreign policy strategy

BY FORTUNE ABANG

As Nigeria celebrates the 25th anniversary of unbroken democratic governance since the transition from military rule in 1999, foreign affairs experts are of the view that the President Bola Tinubu administration's foreign policy strategy centered on Democracy, Development, Demography, and Diaspora (4-D) has achieved a lot, but more still needs to be done to realise the objectives the initiative seeks to achieve fully.

Explaining the four-dimensional space built by the Tinubu administration for the country's foreign policy, Nigeria's Foreign Affairs Minister, Amb. Yusuf Tuggar said the initiative aims to drive Nigeria's overall development by ensuring that Nigeria's strategic national interests are effectively represented worldwide as "Nigeria and indeed, Africa's development, depends increasingly on a new line of vision."

The 4-D strategy is one of the Tinubu administration's visions to drive its Renewed Hope Agenda from the foreign scene.

Experts believe that since Tinubu took over the mantle of leadership from Muhammadu Buhari in May 2023, expectations have risen higher for the government to improve the nation's age-long non-alignment in the international scene.

The analysts said while Nigeria's foreign policy gained global commendation for tenuously promoting Africa's interests at both the sub-regional and continental levels without compromising its position, the administration has yet to explore fully the potential of the 4-D foreign policy strategy to tackle internal challenges and embark on the journey toward economic transformation.

Speaking in an interview with the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN), a serving diplomat who pleaded anonymity, decried the massive recall of envoys by the administration, but urged the government to put mechanisms in place for quick responses to emergencies during conflict situations especially when it affects Nigerians living abroad.

"My appointment letter to be an envoy stated three years, but the new government asked all of us to return home. No country in the world recalls all its foreign principals and envoys at the same time. It is never done.

President Tinubu

"How do you expect the interests of Nigerians living abroad to be protected?"

"So, it means we have willfully compromised our nationals to bear the brunt of whatever they get, wherever they are."

Prof. Jonah Onuoha, a university teacher, said Nigeria's foreign policy strategy has positioned the country on a pedestal to be visible globally and enjoy recognition as a sub-regional and continental hegemon with the right to speak and be listened to.

Onuoha, a professor of International Relations and the Head of the Political Science Department at the University of Nigeria, Nsukka, said Nigeria's Afro-centric foreign policy posture "has offered the country worldwide visibility and recognition".

According to him, Nigeria implemented this foreign policy thrust over the years through various programmes such as the anti-colonial struggle, anti-apartheid policy, promotion of peace and security, promotion of African unity and cooperation, and the implementation of technical aid cooperation with some African countries, among others.

Israeli Ambassador to Nigeria, Michael Freeman told NAN that Nigeria's 4-D foreign policy strategy has recorded remarkable feats under the Tinubu administration.

Freeman reiterated Israel's commitment to working closely with the administration to support it in its quest to realise the mandate it has set.

"We are excited and happy to work with President Tinubu and his Renewed Hope Agenda.

"We'll certainly key into that. We want to partner with him and we want to work with his government.

"Tinubu's vision of a million new jobs in the digital economy is something we want to associate with and work with through the i-FAIR programme.

"We hope to announce that in the future. We are also excited to work with him on economic issues, agriculture, health, education – all of the different sectors – and certainly, we see a bright future for Nigeria and Israel.

"Together, we can achieve amazing things and we are excited about the future. Before now, there has been a clarion call for partnerships between Israeli and Nigerian security forces to tackle issues that pertain to lives and property.

"Now, not much has been done in that regard because the more efforts are made, the more they are being foiled," Freeman said.

Nigeria's foreign affairs minister at a public forum reiterated that the 4-D policy doctrine provides dynamic and unique concepts for the advancement of Nigeria's relations with the outside world.

"The Tinubu 4-D policy aligns with the core vision of the ministry to effectively position itself as Nigeria's window to the international community.

"Implementing the Tinubu 4-D policy will help create more opportunities to attract foreign direct investment.

"It will promote relevant awareness on the power of art and culture to foster understanding and cooperation amongst nations and create the ministry's effort at blending culture and diplomacy in repositioning Nigeria's identity globally," Tuggar said.

Dr Frank Onyekwelu, President-General of Nigerian Citizens Association South Africa (NICASA), said although the led administration's 4-D foreign policy initiatives are good, more should be done to enable compatriots to work in tandem with the policies in tackling economic challenges.

Foreign affairs analysts agree that sustaining the gains made from the 4-D approach so far and making significant progress toward tackling poverty, insecurity, and other social challenges will require diplomatic dexterity and consistency in the implementation of the four-pronged strategy.

They restated the need for Tinubu administration to remain steadfast in ensuring the success of the policy as anything less could be considered a failure.
